Business & Industries Council

Its all about the possibilities!

The delegate of China proposed a moderated caucus on the topic, "to discuss the cost of living crisis by finding an alternative to dollar scarcity issue". The speakers list commenced with the delegate of NAHB mentioning that they strive to attain the professional success of all its members in the USA, and that it represents the interests of housing-buildings. The delegate of NAHB accused the Biden-administration of no cooperation with regard to tackling the increasing dollars in the market.

Siemens accuses Coopers of using the dollars and earning revenue from it, Coopers replies back saying, "We ensure that each of our clients get affordable payments". One of the delegates levelled a serious allegation on the USA about the recession, to which USA issued a clarification saying that it was caused due to unavoidable-factors such as COVID-19 and the Russia-Ukraine war.

It's time to get down to business...

Here on, the committee witnesses a tough fight between delegates, the delegate of Cargill accused the Russian Federation of blocking supply chain, such as fuel, chemicals, and fertilizers. Goldman Sachs accuses China of introducing a recession in countries like Sri Lanka, to which the delegate of China replied saying that they support bipolarity and multipolarity and not just the Chinese Yuan. JP Morgan accuses PWC of a tax-scandal where-in confidential information was leaked.

Geopolitical Tensions, Economic Challenges, and financial scandals:

The Global summit on the cost-of-living crisis

The Global Summit on Cost of Living Crisis saw a heated debate among the delegates over various issues related to the crisis. The issue of China's housing crisis was brought up, with Goldman Sachs accusing China of the brutal housing crisis in the country, citing that it takes 10 to 15 years of savings for someone to buy a home in China and that people are suffering. In response, China accused Goldman Sachs of supporting dollarization, which is harming its company.

A moderated caucus was called to reduce overdependence on one currency, and the delegate of India proposed a solution where all countries would be given a solution. Goldman Sachs claimed that the USA has given sanctions and wars, pointing out that the USA invaded Iraq. Cargill asked how considering BRICS (Brazil, Russia, India, China, and South Africa) was any different from considering the US dollar. JP Morgan stated that the company's interests lie in dollars, and that BRICS is not perceived to be a perfect or viable option. Finally, Saudi oil accused Goldman Sachs of bribery, citing a 4 million fraud case stolen by a general manager in Goldman Sachs. Overall, the Global Summit on Cost-of-Living Crisis highlighted the various challenges and tensions faced by different countries in addressing this issue. The summit showcased the need for collaborative efforts and innovative solutions to tackle the cost of living crisis and its impacts on unemployment.

Education Council

The Russo-Ukrainian plot grows thicker

The Delegate of Ukraine mentioned the setbacks they are facing in the education sector due to recent problems with Russia and how they are combating it, and to everyone's surprise, the Delegate of Russia intervenes!

The Delegate, blind to the irony of the situation, asks Ukraine how they plan to face these problems, and the delegation of Russia meets its end. The Delegate of TATA wastes no time in shooting back at Russia by passing a new point: Point of Extension, or as Russia might call it, Point of Hell. This point allowed delegates to further extend on a speech or POI made by another delegate, and each and every delegate took their shots at Russia.

“Isn't it ironic that the country that is causing the hinderance of education in Ukraine is asking what they plan to do?”, “Why is Russia spending these funds on military for illegal invasion in Ukraine and not instead focusing it on their education?”, “How is Russia criticizing others when they are accused of abduction of Ukrainian children?” were just a few hits Russia had no choice but to take. When all hope seemed lost for the Russian Federation, the man himself walked in through the council doors to save the day, President Vladimir Putin.

Crisis! Vladimir Putin, Russian Education in Ukraine?!

“Let the people learn Russian, the most powerful language in the world!” Vladimir Putin also stated that in a few months' time, the US Dollar will be of use no more. The Delegate of Nigeria bites back, claiming that “the USA can buy 30 Russia's” to which the President replies, “the US Dollar will be thrown out of the windows and get run over by a hundred Russian lorries!”.

After a series of back-and-forth accusations and bold statements, the President of the Russian Federation, Vladimir Putin claims he should “be in another council, maybe Human Rights” and walks out of the war room. After the President's dramatic exit, a motion for an unmoderated caucus was raised and the meeting was adjourned.

A productive start to the summit!

The council brought up numerous issues faced globally in their speeches, some of which include racism faced by minorities, castes and immigrants, terror groups and organisations disrupting schooling, child labour, educational inequalities faced by some groups due to the pandemic and accessibility to education as a whole.

Next, the Delegate of Nigeria raised a motion to move into a moderated caucus on the topic “Illiteracy in Developing Countries”. During this debate, various delegations discussed their approaches to combat illiteracy, with special emphasis on developing countries. This emphasis was predominantly given through a bold statement made by the delegate of ADTALEM, who claimed that only 10 nations form three-quarters of the illiteracy of the entire world. The Delegate of Nigeria immediately shot back, claiming that the countries the delegate mentioned were countries with the highest populations of the world, hence justifying the statistics mentioned.

Other delegations mentioned their approaches, while also being cross-examined and questioned by their fellow delegates. After the speaker's list was exhausted, a motion to move into an unmoderated caucus for 10 minutes was put forward by the Delegate of Sudan which was extended by the Delegate of Nigeria for another 10 minutes, hence concluding the council's session.

Healthcare Council

Ethically Controversial...

IN NO TIME, this mod caucus took an intense turn, when the delegate of The United Kingdom accused the delegate of The United States for their soaring healthcare costs and the delegate of The United States shot back with an equally feisty response, asserting that it was not the place of the opposing delegate to comment on the The United States' stance.

Consequently, the delegate of The Healthcare Service Corporation said that the blame cannot be placed on a single entity, which is believed to be a jab at the earlier proceedings involving the delegate of The United Kingdom. When the next speaker, the delegate of Johnson & Johnson expressed their views on the topic, the delegate of The United Kingdom(once again) brought up the organization's infamous scandal, the asbestos-contaminated talcum powder. The delegate of Sun Pharmaceuticals posed an effective inquiry against the delegate of Pfizer on certain 'ethically controversial clinical trials conducted by Pfizer to produce drugs against mental illnesses'.

When the delegate of China delivered their speech, they were met with widespread 'tuts' on their claims of having taken moves to protect data used in diagnosis. "What will China do to prevent the unethical use of data, something that is a topic of valid concern, considering the recent TikTok ban whirlwind?", was the question posed by the delegate of Johnson and Johnson, one that was surely on the minds of all those in committee.

Outrage was written all over the face of the delegate of the African Union CDC, at the proposition by the delegate of J&J to 'reduce doctor-patient interactions'.

CRISIS STRIKES THE COUNCIL!

"A bizarre fungal disease has been discovered in the United States of America. It appears to be predominant among African American neighborhoods and is fatal immediately after infection."

Soon enough, the council moved to a moderated caucus on the topic of solutions for the crisis at hand. Apart from isolation, a common idea proposed by most delegates, research on the specimen was a plausible suggestion.

As always, the air in the room thickened, for every delegate picked another to accuse. The most notable accusations involved that of the delegate of The United States and the delegate of the Africa CDC in response to the former's conjecture to research on the disease. "MY BROTHERS are DYING", said the delegate of the Africa CDC. "How do you expect me to wait around for research? This is an act of Bioterrorism!"

"CRISIS UPDATE: The UN has just issued a statement claiming that China is responsible for the outbreak of this mysterious fungal disease."

Serious accusations surfaced between the delegates, the acknowledgement of the possibility of The United States bribing the UN into issuing the crisis update statement, being one of the more notable.

The delegate of Johnson and Johnson shared some food for thought by their obscure statement which implied that the Pharmaceutical companies are the root problems, being the only ones in the council who stand to benefit, regardless of the outcome of the council.

Myanmar calls out China's policies

Further on, the delegate of Myanmar expressed his concern over China's 1 child policy, which led to a POI from the delegate of Sun Pharmaceuticals; this was a rhetorical question about whether the delegate of Myanmar believes that China should introduce a 3-child policy instead.

Human Rights Council

A New Light for Human Rights

The Human Rights Council Session commenced at 9:45, with its main goal being to discuss the state of human rights policies in vulnerable states, while focusing on the role played by developed countries and the private sector, in order to strengthen present conventions and analyse systemic policy failures in a post-2020 world order. With the completion of Roll Call and starting with a Motion to Commence Formal Session that was passed by the director, the debate had officially begun with hope and belief for a better tomorrow.

Tensions rise between Russia & Ukraine

Ukraine after demanding peace and complete withdrawal of Russian military forces in accordance with the General Speaking List, claims to have held out on military aggression against Russia. Since Ukraine had time remaining, he was available for Points of Information (POI), to which a country none other than Russia came to retaliate.

Russia directly accuses the President, who could've stopped this war, along with many other bold claims and accusations to the president, and the country as a whole.

The delegate of Russia believes that NATO is intent of ruining Russia, therefore claiming them to first instigate war. To this, the delegate of Ukraine had no answer.

CRISIS: THE BIG BANG

Bioweapons were launched from an unrecognized source into the heart of China, Beijing. The Biden administration has been blamed for this.

Due to the claims made by the Chinese and US delegates there have been tensions in the Pacific ocean between marine forces of the respective countries, due to a "threat to national security", and Beijing has moved into a rule of martial law to maintain peace in the region. Shell, in association with Chevron, has been accused along with the USA by the ICC of funding the bioweapon program. In response, both countries have initiated a military coupe along with the respective governments and ramped up their programs in Africa and South America, overpolluting both the Amazon and Nile through their operations in Brazil and Egypt.

India and Pakistan, end up blaming each other and have a conflict of interest in Kashmir because of military advances by both countries for the purpose of "national security" causing a situation of unrest.

Earth & Climate Change Council

The green coalition begins its journey

Greenpeace proposes an unmoderated caucus for a whopping two hours! It is unfortunately, not granted.

The earth and climate change council has been tasked with resolving a new, hot and impending concern that the world faces. With the General Speaker's round, countries and organisations stated their opinions, views and current approach on tackling the council's agenda- giving inputs and possible solutions that they have seen work out previously.

In light of the Russo-Ukraine crisis currently in action, there was a brief sense of suspicion in the air. The silence was broken when the delegate of Ukraine gave their maiden speech on their role in resolving the energy crisis, followed by the delegate of Russia who gave a new compelling perspective as a response to allegation it had been receiving. The delegate of Russia stated that the major reason why they still lead the crude oil figures is because of the demand worldwide that it needs to cater to. Russia called it "unfair" and questioned if sanctions were a justified response to the eminent favour they had been doing for the remainder of the world, catering to their demands and making up about 40% of other economies' crude oil imports.

The council saw moments of heated debates during the two motions to cross-examine, but ended on a note of global consensus on what stands ahead of us. The quote by the delegate of IEA presented the council a new objective : "If the great human mind is able to control the sun why can't we control ourselves"

Shell speaks in Shillings

EACC, DPSShj, The delegate of Shell PLC through their stupendous oration showed the council that they meant real business. Asking thought provoking POIs and producing numbers from various sources on the fly, they kept each nation busy counting every single penny they have spent in the past. In a series of POIs that followed their debut speech in the general speaking round, Shell responded with facts and figures as if they were ligatures to the speaker. And those ligatures did have a weight of their own.

Once the delegate finished his POIs he was challenged with the motion to be cross-examined by the delegate of Pakistan on the grounds of allegedly involving in the practice of "greenwashing". In the repartee that followed, the delegate of Shell established that Shell plc was among the leading profitable businesses that take environment into consideration and was one of the greatest contributors for environmental causes in the council.

Hell breaks loose. Gazprom CEO dead.

The council entered into a state of crisis as the CEO of Gazprom was kidnapped by a member of the Extinction Rebellion on Russian grounds. State of panic ensued in the council, and the gavel got off an inch of the mass, in the efforts of the council directors to establish decorum. As further details revealed, the criminal held connections with Greenpeace, an organization with a motto to go green through non-violent means. The alleged delegates along with Russia under whose governance this crisis happened was put in the spotlight for a trial that was to come.

Waves of questions and condemnation spread across the council as delegate after delegate voiced their opinions on the crisis. Soon, after a brief moment of relief provided by the news of his well being, tragedy struck as the CEO was reported dead. Both the delegates of Greenpeace and Extinction rebellion were of the stance that one such incident should not determine the organization's ethos and policy. Russia on the other hand, rejected any allegation stating the reason that, being a country with such a large geography, it was impossible to expect political order at all places at all times. The crisis culminated in the delegate of ExR preparing and presenting a directive, that was passed in the council unanimously.

Science & Technology Council

CRISIS: THE WHISPERERS IN THE DARK

Committee session, as peaceful as ever, going on as per normal. Nations and organizations alike establishing their stance and deliberating the best course of action to benefit all of humanity. The talks stretch from national development goals and ambitions to corporate data leaks and mismanagement, all to protect the rights of the individual.

Suddenly, the lights were killed, and an eerie silence befell the room, there was an ominous silence council wide as the delegations sat dumbstruck. Then, without warning, the doors swung open, and dawning scarily plain corporate clothing, in walked Elon Musk and Mark Zuckerberg, in the flesh.

After making their way to the center of the room, the two began speaking. First, was the reknowned Elon Musk, who began to talk about the advancements of AI, however, strangely referred to all delegations as “your species”. The talk gets more and more maniacal by the minute as they bring up all the things AI controls already.

When suddenly, one of the resources gets up and stands up to Elon. He bends down, grabs a speaker, and places it on the table, hitting play on his laptop to start an ambient emotional track.

He begins speaking out against the injustice and brings up past family trauma caused by the great data leaks that caused him heavy losses, bearing heavy on his soul. He got right up to Zucc’s face, he looked him dead in the eye, his own, filled with rage, vengeance and above all, hurt. As the music climaxed, he let go of all his inhibitions and struck back. However, the combined might of Zuckerberg and Musk were no match for him, as he was dragged away, never to be seen again.

To Infinity & Beyond!

The nations and organizations of the world coalesce for a better, safer and smarter tomorrow.

Day 1 of YGSS 2023 marked a significant milestone in the global conversation around AI development. The delegates representing various nations and multinational corporations demonstrated their commitment to improving AI governance and working towards a more sustainable future for the field.

The council session began with a motion from the delegate of Baidu to open the Global Summit on AI. The delegate of the Center for Governance of AI then presented their opening statement, raising concerns about data regulation and privacy breaches following the diversification of AI.

During the session, the delegates of the Center for Governance of AI and Baidu raised several points of inquiry about the use of AI in the Russo-Ukrainian war, including the current absence of transparency and Microsoft Corporation's role in leaking sensitive user information. While the delegate of Russia justified their approach with reference to practical use of AI for defense, the delegate of Microsoft Corporation failed to provide an immediate response.
